Objective:

Adult psychology is the study of psychological changes and development that occur from the end of adolescence until the end of a person's life. Some psychological conditions that can affect adults include:

- Posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD)
A complex condition that can affect both adults and children, but the symptoms in children may differ from adults
- Emotional dysregulation (ED)
A transdiagnostic domain that can be associated with multiple psychiatric diagnoses from childhood to adulthood
- Chronic pain
A controversial psychological condition that can be influenced by psychological factors like stress
Some other psychological concepts include:
- Behavioral theory
Focuses on a person's behaviors rather than their feelings, and suggests that behaviors are conditioned by stimuli in an environment
- Cognitive development
How humans acquire, organize, and use knowledge. Cognitive development continues through adolescence and adulthood
- Cognitive behavioral therapy

An advanced form of behavior therapy that helps people understand their inner thoughts and perceptions to make sense of their behavior patterns
